TRANSLATION:

Today at 7:00PM is the inarguable exhibition at the Funglode art gallery of her first exhibition titled as "Las Pracas."

Santo Domingo. Paula Saneaux graduated with extraordinary merits from the fine arts school at Altos de Chavon. Today she inaugurates her first pictorial exhibition at the Democratic Global Development Foundation (FUNGLODE) art gallery.

Saneaux obtained the highest-grade point average of the students that recently graduated from Altos de Chavon School of Design; and is currently packing her bags to go abroad to study at Parsons the New School of Design in New York City; this prestigious School has bestowed upon Paula Saneaux a full scholarship due to her extraordinary grade point average.

"Las Pracas" is the name of the exhibition, which includes sixteen paintings in medium formats and a life size sculpture. The engagement for tonight starts at 7:00PM at Funglode's Art Gallery.

After she studied Advertisement at the university of APEC, where she also graduated Summa Cum Laude, she initiated her formal studies in Fine Arts in Altos Chavon School of Design where she obtained a technical degree in Fine Arts and graduated Summa Cum Laude and Valedictorian (the highest-grade point average of the entire school promotion).

To finish her studies with a major in Fine Arts she has also been awarded a full tuition scholarship at Parsons the New School of Design in New York. Saneaux was also awarded an additional scholarship for summer painting and drawing classes at Parsons the New School of Design in New York.
